

ABSTRACT

In a display system capable of displaying images fed from a plurality of sensing devices on an indicator, horizontal and vertical synchronizing signals of the individual measuring devices are synchronized with one another and desired image signals are selected for on-screen presentation during each successive horizontal scanning period, whereby operator-selected multiple images are displayed.